When I worked in the Toronto Stock Exchange tower, my days were spent onscreen and indoors. Retired at 59, with my time my own, I took a night class with Gareth Bate, walked dogs, geocached, sketched and explored a lot more of Toronto. “Stop and look around,” is the advice of Ferris Bueller on his Day Off. Poets also urge us to pay attention: “Taste what is in your mouth, if it is water, still taste it,” says Marge Piercy. Henri Riviere’s Thirty-six Views of the Eiffel Tower, published in 1902, inspired me to publish 36 very personal views of my city, made in the early years of the 21st century — since Gareth set me to painting the city, and encouraged me to further study.
